

PROJECT:

Annie Get Your Gun

Or the one where so many things went wrong

The project involved performing a home inspection for a realtor who purchased the property on behalf of an elderly woman. However, the project was complicated by unforeseen circumstances and delays, such as a delayed arrival of the movers, roofing company, and parking issues. Although the client was frustrated with the outcome, despite us doing everything possible to ensure success and learn from the situation to prevent similar issues in the future.

This is how we got the title "Annie, get your gun". We were going through the shed in backyard and I heard hissing and thought it was some kind of hydraulic hose leaking. Realized hose was more like a garden hose but then saw Mr. Possum. Client said she'd take care of him (which she later denied). I thought was hilarious but she did not find it funny the next day.
